Can t I make up my mind without having you butt in all the time? And he scowled portentously. Well, you said-- I began. Oh, shut up, can t you? And he jumped to his feet and vanished indoors. When he returned he wore the air of one strong in virtue. His frown was gone and he smiled benignantly down upon me. What have you done now? I asked. Telephoned Hunter, he answered, briefly; and he says the boy hasn t arrived yet, but he ll start him back as soon as he gets there--Hello, there he is now! But I don t see Simon with him. He couldn t have lost the beast again! Hello, you sir! what the devil have you done with that dog? Thus addressed, the urchin approached apologetically and removed his cap. He seemed ill at ease and shifted...
