Vintage, 2012. Book Condition: New. Brand New, Unread Copy in Perfect Condition. A+ Customer Service! Summary: "A remarkably supple novel that gleams with the smoky chiaroscuro of family love."-Michiko Kakutani, The New York Times "A novel of great emotional power, of heart-twisting intimacy and intellectual force." - Newsday "An intricately reflective, simply beautiful book." - Los Angeles Times "Only a virtuoso could manage such a narrative, and Baxter is and does." - The Washington Post Book World "A book one reads with pleasure from the first word to the last for the delicacy and truth of its perceptions." -J. M. Coetzee "[Baxter's] prose is like filtered late-summer light dancing through leaves not quite turned yet-a light bathed with sadness, humor, and a clear, intelligent intensity." - USA Today " First Light is a novel that moves backward in time, traveling from past to present as though through a tunnel of memory. . . . Like Chekhov, [Baxter] is both tough-minded and compassionate, and he never makes his characters more or less than what they are. They are human, and that in itself is a rare achievement for a writer, a thing to be celebrated above and beyond all other achievements in this splendid book." -Paul Auster "Here is a voice worth listening to, a voice that has shown itself, in this wonderful, magical novel, to command the music of the spheres." - San Jose Mercury News "Without question, Charles Baxter is among our best contemporary writers-always graceful, always dramatic. Superlatives are insufficient. Here is literature. Here is art." -Tim O'Brien "Charles Baxter asks the most wonderful questions and addresses the most essential subjects-the things we have been thinking but haven't . . . known how to begin to say." -Francine Prose "It's exceedingly rare to come across writing as seamless...
